I have always been interested in make things, so nobody was surprised when I became an engineer. When I was six years old my dad helped me build a tree house in our back garden. That was the first time I built anything. Later I added more rooms to the house. It looked really good, so I thought I could do something more difficult and I built a bridge from tree house to my bedroom window. Unfortunately, that was not successful. It broke while I was walking across it and I fell and hurt my leg. My parents were upset, but all I could think about was how to repair it and make it better. After studying engineering at university, I went travelling for a year and visited some amazing bridges, such as the Golden Gate Bridge in San Francisco and the world's longest bridge in China. This bridge is not using by cars- it is only used by trains to travel between Shanghai and Beijing. It is more than 100 miles long! Soon after my travels, I got my first job with a big engineering company. Since then, I have worked on hotels and a big shopping centre and I have done a lot more travelling for my job. I might build another bridge one day. That is my dream, and the bridge definitely won't break next time.
